CARSON CITY: Tuesday, September 16, 1873.

THE COLUMBUS WAGON ROAD QUESTION.

The Importance of Immediate and Pavorable Action.

The Necessity of Attending the Meet-To-Night.

The thing which transfused the life blood of business and thrix into the fast-shrivelling veins of Carson City is the Virginia and Truckee Railway. The self-imp sed tax which insured the speedy completion of that enterprise is what saved this place from drying up and blowing away. This fact, repeated so often as that the very children of the town have got it by heart, is merely referred to here as illustrating the quick and remunerative returns that follow the epening of the arteries of trade and in-tercourse. If ever any place maintained the proportions of a thrifty town by the systemation of artificial resources that place is Carson. In order to supply ourselves with business we have found it constantly needful to skirmish round and make business. Our enemies point at the map of the State and claim that the Capitol is here in violation of all the vital principles of geography. So far as the fact that the Capital is in Carson and the State House stands in the midst of Capitol Square as a lasting and immovable token of that fact, these and immovable token of that fact, these charges are comparatively true. We have retained the Capitol because we have fought for it. We got the Railway and the State House by a combination of effort and money. We live, not because of the spontaneous pouring of gratuitous natriment into our throats, but here were hard the state. but because we have wrenched the staff of life from unwilling circumstances. We were very low at one time-four or five years ago we were dreadful weak and found it extremely difficult to get up as much as a smile. Now we are on our feet, strong, cheerful, thrifty. Enour feet, strong, cheerful, thrifty. Eaergy and courage did it—money and brains invested where it would pay. The time has come when we should make another struggle. We must dig another canal or navigation will soon begin to slacken. We will explain why it is that it behooves the property owners of Carson to be ready to meet the demands made by the Columbus Read Persient. made by this Columbus Road Project. THE WOOD BUSINESS PINCHING

OUT. For several years past there have have been employed in the mountains near here hundreds of wood choppers. The trade growing out of this interest has obliged every merchant in town to keep a wagon running into the moun-tains. Those who have carried on this wood supplying business have disbursed more than half a million of dollars to these wood cutters annually for the last four or five years. We have it from competent authority that the standing timber which will systain this wood trade—the trade which concentrates in Carson by reason of the cutting of fire-wood from the Sierra—will be exhausted in another Sammer's work. In other in another Summer's work. In other words, these rich surface diggings of ours are very nearly worked out. When this is gone we must either subside into the proportions of a decaying mining camp and be content to play bean poker and eat our own heads off, or strike for business in other directions. The for business in other directions. The direction which is clearly indicated is that over toward which lie the borax fields and quartz veins of Columbus. We have already explained the magnitude of that trade and its possibilities. All that is needed is that we tap it with a properly constructed wagon-road and the trade and the transportation of that promising district are portation of that promising district are our own. It is idle to talk of the Va & T. Company's building that wagon road: for we know they won't do it. When it is built they have got to put their rates down so as to be able to compete with the C. P. at Wadsworth or it is no go. Besides that, the R. R. company have already given a thousand dellars. No. There is no rest for us; no cessation of our spirit and effort of enterprise if we would keep the business of the place, from subsiding altogether. We have got to work and struggle and give away a part of our profits, year by year, or get into the shoal water where no business comes, but where mould and decay do creep on and take possession. The meeting to-night is no boy's play. It is intended to treat of the very vital interests of the place, interests which concern everybody, the merchant, the hotel-keeper, the blacksmith, the hay-yardman, the saloon keeper, the apothecary, the printer and all of us. Nobody in the town can afford to shirk the respon-

ALFX. LEPORT makes a gorgeous display with his hams-his Phonix hams. from Chicago, we mean. They—the Phoenix article—are sugar cured and good judges pronounce them excellent.

in no wise interfere with the Little Giant Meeting. On the contrary it will call together many of the subscribers to that fund—more, perhaps, than could be otherwise got together. It is important that this steam fire engine business should be rounded into shape. That machine at present is something of an elephant. She represents, as near as possible, that large and unprofitable vacinty in nature known as nobody's business. Doubless if a fire were to occur where her services would be needed she could be ect to the front by some she could be got to the front by some hook or crook; but that isn't enough, there ought to be a head to affairs, and in order that there may be, a company should be formed and organized to take charge of her and attend to all matters and things pertaining to her, both in and out of the house-for housing we hope she soon may have. So let's have the meeting, as called for, at the Court House. If nothing is done but to adjourn to a definite time, that is better, a good deal, than no action.

ing. Sunday is a fruitful, too fruitful day for d. d's., and so it happens that Monday morning brings its crop of small malefactors under the severe eye of Justice. Yielding to the seductions of the flowing bowl and then prematurely suffering himself to be enfolded in the arms of Morpheus, one Walter Hood became an unlicensed lodger under the shadow of the Capitol, and being found in this inadmissable condition he was taken in custody and consigned to the city prison. He was elected to the disbursement of the sum of $15—with the customary alternative. He paid the money. A companion piece to this-all the attendant circumstances being precisely the same, was that of one Tom Stone. He had filled his stomach with an over draught of strong drink and like Hood had made an untimely bed on the Plaza. He paid his fine of $15, like a little man. John Cook made a great and unscemly tumult in a hurdy house and so incurred the penalty of an inand so incurred the penanty of an au-fraction of the peace. It was all along of the direful effects of strong waters. John's spree cost him a night in the station house and a double engle. He produced the amalgam.

THE REE. MR. CALLOWAY of West Virginia, besides the two excellent sermons that he preached in the forenoon and evening at the Episcopal church, entertained the teachers and children of the Sunday School after service in the morning with a very pleasing extempore discourse. The Reverend gentleman is an enthusiastic Sunday School man, loves children, and knows how to talk to them. They are sorry he is only a sojourner in these parts, for they would be glad to hear him often.

REV. ME. CALLOWAY of Charleston, West Virginia, occupied the pulpit of St. Peter's Episcopal Church on Sunday. He preached the sermon both in the morning and evening. His manner is very pleasing. He is contemplating a removal to the Pacific Coast, we believe. Mr. Calloway's wife is a daughter of our old time resident Father King, the Auditor of Ormsby county.

SHEYER & MORRIS have lately received an immense stock of goods in their line of business. NOT THE MILKY WAY .- The Nor ristown Herald remarks that " when a man milks a cow he should not attempt to smoke a cigar at the same time. A young man out in the country tried it, and got along well enough until he lowered his head and touched the cow's flank with the lighted end of his weed. The next instant himself and cigar were dread fully 'put out.' The cow introduced about two tons' weight into one of her hind legs, and then pressed it under the milker's left jaw. When he ceased whirling around, and my-riads of stars had disappeared, he said farming was the hardest work a man could put his hands to.

1 A Novel GROST -The Detroit Free Press says: The conductors on the First street route have a nice little sensation all to themselves. About ten nights ago the conductor of the last car down, having no passengers beyond Twentieth street, was standing in the front door talking to the driver, when he heard a rustle of silk, and looked about to see a woman seated in the car. He wondered to himself at her agility in boarding the car while the horses were on a trot, and after the car had passed along several blocks he started forward to collect her fare, and to ask her where she desired to stop off. She had her face turned away from him, and as he put out his hand to touch her shoulder the lady vanished. The conductor's hair stood up, and the driver felt cold chills run up his back. Every night since then, as half a dozen conductors allege, the ghostly passenger boards the last car, provided there are no other passengers, and after riding a few blocks she suddenly vanishes. Some of the drivers have remained on the rear platform to see where she got on, but the first thing they know she is on the car. They describe her as being richly attired in Winter clothing, having a shawl, hood and muff, and having a snawl, noot at a glimpse of so closely veiled that a glimpse of the control of the cont her features is impossible. over the general public may think of
